New pathways connect the MGH campus

When the Lunder Building opens in the summer of 2011, patients, visitors and staff will benefit not only from its new clinical and support facilities, but also from new, more direct pedestrian routes across the campus.

When the Lunder Building opens in the summer of 2011, individuals will be able to walk through MGH buildings from the “front” of the campus to the “back” without having to walk outside. Beginning at the Charles-MGH MBTA station on Cambridge Street, pedestrians will be able to enter the Yawkey Center for Outpatient Care, travel along a level 2 corridor, walk over Fruit Street via a new pedestrian bridge, called the Bander Bridge, and into the Lunder Building, then back down to the ground level Emergency and Lunder Building lobbies, which will connect to the White Lobby and core campus.
