Aisha S James, MD, MED

Primary Care Physician,

MGH Everett Family Care & Sickle Cell Disease Center

Tell us a little about your clinical practice and your role in your practice/division/department.

I provide primary care to diverse panel of adult and children. Outside of my clinical role I work to promote equity in the departments of Medicine and Pediatrics through medical education, clinical and community based work.

When did you come to MGH and why?

I joined MGH as resident for the excellent clinical training. I stayed as a faculty member because of the amazing colleagues and patients I get to work with daily.

Is there a project or program you want to tell us a little about?

I am excited to be expanding the DOM Anti-Racism and Equity educational initiative (DARE). DARE is an innovative program that helps bring an equity lens to all medical education content with the goal of addressing health inequities in clinical care.

What is one thing you love about your work?

Working alongside clinicians focused in providing excellent care to their patients despite the many systemic obstacles that get in the way.

Tell us a little bit about your life outside of medicine.

I love spending time with my husband Patrick Sullivan (Bigelow 11 RN), and our two kids.
